

MARCH 16, 2020

To our valued clients, partners, friends and ambassadors:

It goes without saying that these are challenging times. As with everyone else, we are suffering with event cancellations and uncertainty. However, one thing is clear: We are resilient. Our industry was built by strong-willed, hard working people and we are prepared to weather this crisis. Sadly, these cancellations mean we have no work for our wonderful service team, but our entire core team is working diligently and we are here to help you. Now is the time to think ahead and plan for your future events.

That is not our only request, however. There are so many folks in the service industry that have lost their income. Many of these workers live paycheck to paycheck. Please, support our local businesses and their employees through to-go orders and gift card purchases. Hire that caterer or event service provider you've been looking at. Postpone your events rather than cancel them. We will get through this, but we must stand together and support our beloved industry. These workers are vital to our industry and they depend on all of us to get them through these times.

Sincerely,

Cade & Ingrid Nagy
